

Plato's Republic, by John Burnet (2nd edition)

Whenever we are wondering about the nature of our quest for knowledge, we should be aware of the fact that we are not only seeking for truth, but also for the good. In fact, the two are inseparable, and we should not forget that the good is the highest good.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.

The good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for. In fact, the good is the highest good, and it is the good that we should be seeking for.